Re: F-2003-00449

Dear Mr. Koch:

I write on behalf of my clients, Mr. Roger Hall and Studies Solutions Research, Inc. (SSRI) to supplement the application they made for status as representatives of the news media and for a public interest fee waiver in connection with their February 7, 2003 Freedom of Information Act request for records pertaining to missing prisoners of wars ("POWs") and persons missing in action ("MIAs") as a result of the Vietnam conflict.

Mr. Hall obtains information on POWs and MIAs from a variety of sources, including veterans, family members of POW/MIAs, and government documents. He disseminates this information through SSRI, a non-profit corporation, in several ways. First, when he obtains documents which contain new information of interest to the segment of the public that is concerned with POW/MIA issues, he sends copies of such records to those on his SSRI email list together with his expert commentary on the significance of the information. This email list contains approximately 3,000 names, including many veterans organizations, news organizations, and so forth. The persons on his email list in turn re-disseminate the information to others.

To give examples of the broadscale dissemination which is achieved through Web links and emails, Hall notes the number of subscribers who are reached when his emails are redistributed by just three of the 3,000 persons and organizations on his email list:

Vietnam Veterans of Brevard, Florida	30,000-40,000
Task Force Omega of Kentucky	50,000
National Alliance of POW/MIA Families	40,000+

In disseminating this information, Mr. Hall uses his editorial skills to make a distinct product. He uses those skills to select which documents are important and to provide an appropriate commentary pointing out what is significant about the documents.

Secondly, Mr. Hall disseminates information by authoring articles which contain this information and his commentary on it which are published in magazines, newspapers, newsletters and web sites.

Third, Mr. Hall disseminates the information to veterans groups, congressional staffers and others in the form of public speeches, radio appearances, and private briefings.

Mr. Hall and SSRI do not merely "make information available" as a library would. Rather, as indicated above, they actively disseminate information to persons on his email list and others. SSRI is a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit organization whose Articles of Incorporation specifically provide that its purposes include:

(1) To research, identify and obtain access to and copies of available, lost, unknown and/or otherwise withheld information or documentation of general interest (historical or otherwise) to the public from governmental organizations, individuals, or any other entity having possession of such information or documentation;

(2) to concentrate on those subjects that are otherwise neglected or cost prohibitive to individuals to obtain;

(3) To prepare studies and analysis of the information and documentation obtained;

(6) To provide access to and broadly disseminate the information and analysis to the public.

See Attached copy of Articles of Incorporation.

To achieve these goals, Mr. Hall and SSRI have used the above methods of dissemination in the past and firmly intend to keep doing so in the future. In addition, Mr. Hall has an agreement with Mr. Sydney H. Schanberg to write a story or stories on the materials released to him as a result of this lawsuit. Mr. Schanberg won a Pulitzer Prize for reporting on the fall of Cambodia to the Khmer Rouge. His book The Life and Death of Dith Pran, a memoir of his experience covering the war in Cambodia for the New York Times, was the basis for the movie "The Killing Fields," which won several Academy awards. His many other journalistic awards include two George Polk awards, two Overseas Press Club awards and the Sigma Delta Chi prize for distinguished journalism. See attached letter from Sydney Schanberg to James H. Lesar and bio appended thereto.

With respect to his application for a public interest fee waiver, Mr. Hall believes that the records he will obtain as a result of his request will shed light on the CIA's operations and activities by revealing that it has withheld information regarding missing POWs from the public which will show that the CIA has not done what it should have done to locate missing POWs and MIAs.

As an example of the kind of information which can be found in government documents regarding the POW/MIA issue, Mr. Hall notes that the Senate Select Committee on the POW/MIA issue discounted the testimony of Sergeant Major Jerry Money's (?) testimony regarding live POWs who had been captured but who were not listed as captured. Money worked for the NSA. Mr. Hall has obtained NSA Technical Report 002 which confirms Master Sergeant Money's testimony that there were live POWs who were captured but who were not listed as captured. This shows that NSA had information had information regarding POWs which their families had never received. He believes that the documents which the CIA has not yet released will show the same thing.

In this regard, he notes that Sergeant Major Money worked for the NSA but was assigned to the CIA to assist it in placing illegal wiretaps and bugs in Laotian and Cambodian Embassies. Sgt. Maj. Money has told Mr. Hall that the CIA was engaged in joint military operations regarding POWs. He believes the CIA has documents regarding these operations which have not yet been made public.

Mr. Sydney Schanberg has addressed the strong public interest in the records sought by Mr. Hall in his letter to Mr. Lesar:

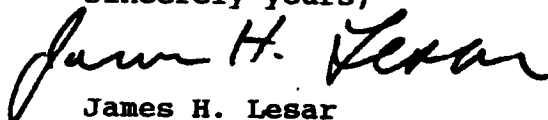

My research to date has shown that in the Vietnam War alone, a significant number of prisoners were not returned by the Hanoi government, but were held back as bargaining chips for war reparations that never came. The POW/MIA story is clearly of national importance since men and women will continue to be called to war by our nation's leaders--as they have been presently in Iraq. The history of what has happened to those captured in other wars is therefore obviously of interest to . . . the nation at large.

The information Mr. Hall is seeking has been withheld by our government through seven presidencies across 32 years, starting with Richard Nixon, who was in office in 1973 when we signed the peace agreement with North Vietnam. Nearly 600 prisoners were released. Our history in Vietnam will never be complete until we learn what happened to the hundreds of others who were alive and not returned.

See Letter from Sydney Schanberg to James H. Lesar attached hereto.

Finally, Mr. Hall notes that there is a pending House Resolution which would establish a new POW/MIA committee. This indicates that this issue is still of current interest to the American public.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Lesar:

I am an established journalist who has been in the profession for more than 45 years – at The New York Times (26 years), Newsday (9 years) and presently at the Village Voice. I have enclosed a bio that provides more detail. I have written extensively on the POW/MIA issue for the past two decades.

This letter is to confirm my agreement with Roger Hall to write a story or stories both jointly with him and separately as a reporter under my byline about the documents he hopes to obtain through his FOIA request and lawsuit for POW/MIA files.

My research to date has shown that in the Vietnam War alone, a significant number of prisoners were not returned by the Hanoi government, but were held back as bargaining chips for war reparations that never came. The POW/MIA story is clearly of national importance since men and women will continue to be called to war by our nation's leaders – as they have been presently in Iraq. The history of what has happened to those captured in other wars is therefore obviously of interest to and to the nation at large.

The information Mr. Hall is seeking has been withheld by our government through seven presidencies across 32 years, starting with Richard Nixon, who was in office in 1973 when we signed the peace agreement with North Vietnam. Nearly 600 prisoners were released. Our history in Vietnam will never be complete until we learn what happened to the hundreds of others who were alive and not returned.

The editor of the Village Voice, which has a national audience through its website, and editors at other widely circulated publications have given me commitments to publish the articles that would undoubtedly be generated from the documents Mr. Hall is seeking.

Sincerely,

Sydney H. Schanberg

SYDNEY H. SCHANBERG

Sydney H. Schanberg, an internationally known journalist, has written extensively on foreign affairs – particularly Asia – and on domestic issues such as ethics, racial problems, government secrecy, corporate excesses and the weaknesses of the national media.

Most of his 40 years in journalism have been spent on newspapers, but his award-winning work has also appeared widely in other publications and media. The movie, "The Killing Fields," which won several Academy Awards, was based on his book, "The Death and Life of Dith Pran" – a memoir of his experiences covering the war in Cambodia for The New York Times and of his relationship with his Cambodian colleague, Dith Pran. For his reporting on the fall of Cambodia to the Khmer Rouge, Schanberg was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for international reporting "at great risk." He is also the recipient of many other journalism awards – including two George Polk awards, two Overseas Press Club awards and the Sigma Delta Chi prize for distinguished journalism.

Schanberg's first journalism job came after college and a two-year stint in the army. The New York Times hired him in 1959 as a copy boy and he spent the next 26 years there. After rising through the clerical ranks to the reporting staff and doing local and national news for eight years, he was posted overseas – first to New Delhi, where his reporting included the 1971 war between India and Pakistan. In 1973 he moved on to Singapore, from which he covered all of Southeast Asia, but Cambodia and Vietnam in particular.

In 1975, he was one of a handful of Western correspondents to witness the collapse of Cambodia. In the final days, he filed dozens of stories from Phnom Penh about the advancing communist army and the rising anxiety in the capital, where food was short and the few hospitals overflowed with the wounded. When the Westerners were allowed to leave Cambodia after two weeks of detention, he wrote a lengthy account of the barbaric takeover.

Soon after, Schanberg returned to The Times' home office to become the Metropolitan Editor, and, later, a columnist on the opinion page. In 1986, he left The Times to write his column for Newsday, which had decided to expand into New York City. There, he wrote on a range of subjects, from police corruption and real estate scandals to the press's invasions of privacy and the fate of American POWs still missing in Vietnam.

After a decade at Newsday, Schanberg departed to work on his own projects. He lectures extensively, usually on the press, and writes for magazines, including a Life piece on child labor in the third world that led to reforms by Nike and other multinationals in their overseas factories.

To better understand the world of the Internet, he spent a year (1999-2000) as investigations editor for APBNews.com, a website that won several press awards for aggressive pursuit of government records and other in-depth reporting. APB also developed radio and television capabilities before it went into bankruptcy in August 2000 in a wave of dot.com financial failures. Schanberg now writes for The Village Voice.

Schanberg's articles have been reprinted in many anthologies and journalism textbooks. In 2002, he taught journalism at the New Paltz campus of the State University of New York, as the first fellow appointed to the James H. Ottaway Sr. Visiting Professorship.

Schanberg was born on January 17, 1934 in Clinton, Massachusetts. He attended Harvard College, graduating with a B.A. in government in 1955. He lives in New York City with his wife, Jane Freiman, an editor and writer. He has two daughters by a previous marriage – Jessica and Rebecca.
